PRINTED REGISTRY NOT AVAILABLE FOR PURGING THE LISTS

Director Porter Says October 19 Will Be Too Late for Striking Off Names-Assessors' Lists Will be Used.

Director Porter today said that County Commissioners Moore, Powers and Gorman, in holding up the printed lists of registered voters until October 19, when It will be too late to strike off the names of any illegal voters which the Penrose-McNichol-Vare machine may have slipped into the lists this fall, are not observing the law. The law requires, he said, that the lists should be out by October 13, or three weeks before election

The Director said that he did not nocuse the County Commissioners of holding up the lists in order to spite him by obstructing his police canvass.

"I would not may anything like that," said the Director, "The County Commissioners said that they could not get the registration flats printed before October 19. The Board of Registration Commissioners has set aside October 19 as the last day for hearing protests against registered values.

"The Board of Registration Commissioners and the police in their canvass must go ahead and do without the regstration lists and use the assessors We would prefer the registration lists of course, as they show who actually regis

CURBSTONE MARKET SOLVES COST OF LIVING PROBLEM

Housewife Saves $1.10 When She Goes A-buying There And Dispenses With The Luxury of High-Priced Delivery By Uniformed Messengers.

10 cents carfare, housewives can save visions there with prices at the Reading Terminal Market. As most of the patrons of the curbstone market buy in they are particular and like to see pro-visions amid artistic surroundings before | used these measurements as a basis for buying, then they must give up hope of effecting this economy. But if they simply want the provisions on their merits, the

It is generally known by those who have been investigating markets in Philndelphia and other cities that the style and convenience demanded by the people have been largely responsible for the high cost of food. For instance, a head of cabbage, which may be bought for 5 cents, if a woman picks it up from a basket and carries it home, is greatly increased in price if it is sent home in the dealer's fancy automobile and delivered in a fancy wooden box by a uniformed messenger. In such a case it is plain to be seen that the cost of the auto, the wages of the chauffeur and the cost of the gasoline have entered into the price of the simple head of cabbage, which will not taste any better than if it were carried home by the housewife herself or one of her children.

The experience of the cabbage applies to all kinds of food bought in fancy markets. If a housewife desires to economize and get down to simplicity in buying she cannot find a better place than the curbstone market. There are several of these passuming institutions in this city. One of the most reasonable is located on South th atreet, from Dickinson to Mifflin atreet. Here can be found everything in the produce line, devoid of frills, at

A reporter for the Evening Ledger took a trip through this open-air market

By the investment of a little energy and , today and compared the prices of procomparison. It can be stated incidentally that many patrons of the terminal market buy in the same quantities. The reporter found that in 17 articles of amount mentioned can be saved by those who go to market three times every week. The housewife could save $1.20 by patronizing the curbstone market instead of the Terminal Market. Deducting 10 cents for earfare for those who live beyond walking distance from the curbatone market the saving would be $1.10 on each trip to market.

It is fair to assume that the housewife who buys in such small quantities is obliged to go to market at least three times a week, and her saving would be $3.50 a week. This is not a spasmodic condition, and investigation has shown that the same margin of economy could be exceted the year round.

The throngs who patronize this cufb market daily prove that these facts have gone home to the housewives, and now they come from all sections of the city. In many cases two women market together and help each other to carry home the morning's marketing. This is why one sees so many baskets on the troller cars bound for the suburbs. The venders of the curbstone market say they will not start the sending-home system, for they realize the moment they do that prices must sonr.

The curbstone market was a busy scene this morning. Well-gowned women rubbed elbows with the poor housewife in shawl and wrapper, and many of the former learned a few points from the poer woman's method of buying. While there are no marble counters and spotlessly clad attendants, the curb merchants are dressed for their work in hand, and are courteous, too, for they want the same customers to come back agein and bring their neighbors. And judging from the business, the women are doing it.
